

MANITOU INCLINE

FAQ's:

Q: Does a public trail easement exist for Barr Trail?

A: No. El Paso County had an access agreement with the Broadmoor that allowed public access to the Barr Trail. The County's agreement expired in 2012. Currently there is no legal provision for public access for the portion of the Barr Trail that traverses the Broadmoor Property.

Q: Who will maintain the Barr Trail?

A: The Barr Trail is currently maintained primarily through volunteer efforts including Friends of the Peak and Rocky Mountain Field Institute. The City would be responsible for maintaining the Barr Trail and would seek to work with volunteers and Friends Groups to maintain the trail.

Q: Will a National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) process still be required for the Northern Trail?

A: Yes, a NEPA process will be required for the North Trail because the upper portion of the Incline is still owned by the U.S. Forest Service.

Q: Who owns and operates the Manitou Incline?

A: The Incline is currently owned by three entities: The City of Colorado Springs, The Manitou & Pikes Peak Railway Company and the U.S. Forest Services. The City of Colorado Springs holds agreements with the two other land owners for public access and is responsible for the maintenance and operation of the Incline.
